pleased with Kent?"

"A dialogue on the subject of the country ensued in a calm and concise—and soon put an end to by the arrival of Charlotte and her sister, just returned from the été-à-été surprised them. Mr. Darcy related the incident which had occasioned his intruding on Miss Bennet, and spent a few minutes longer without saying much to the point." 11

"What can be the meaning of this?" said Charlotte, as Mr. Darcy was gone. "My dear Eliza, he must be in love with Elizabeth; he could never have called on us in this familiar way, if he had not. When Elizabeth told of his silence, it did not seem to her to be in accordance with Charlotte's wishes, to be the case; and, in conjectures, they could at last only suppose his visit to be the result of the difficulty of finding any thing to do, and
